Fighting Fire With Marshmallows

In the sacred words of Kurt Vonnegut, “The only man who ever beat a tank was John Wayne. And he was in another tank.” The problem with revolutions is that by destroying one oppressor, you only create another. Let us imagine deeper, more radical ways to tweak the system than just blowing shit up.

Don't Argue

Never waste breath disputing with a fanatic. They have all their arguments worked out in advance, and they're not interested in discussion anyway. Unless there is a well-established neutral referee present to adjudicate the dispute, walk away from firebreathing partisans — they're a waste of time.

Disenfranchise Money

The disfunctionality of money is in direct ratio to its dominance over other mediums of exchange. But that dominance is purely voluntary on our part.

Barter, trade, dicker, or just exchange gifts. Learn to live with less cash and more community.

Think Global, Act Loco

There are few things that piss off oppressors more than people acting as they please. Cloaking this activity in the guise of “crazy” behavior disarms pseudo-puritanical criticism of “morals” and such. Just be careful that the pose doesn’t turn into reality...

Do It Yourself

Oppression depends on dependency. Anything you can do with your own personal resources is one less thing that you can have held over your head or be threatened with losing.

Learn to sew. Make music. Remodel your home. Fix your car. Get off the grid. Be your own best friend. Maybe them woods hippies was smarter than we knew.

Be Fair

The fundament of equity is that everyone plays by the same rules. Keep them simple, don't make too many of them, but be sure that everyone follows them. You too, Unca Scrooge.

Give

In every human heart lies an innate desire and need to give to others. Deny this drive and you become hard and cold and a tool of the Man.

Jesus said to give all you have to the poor, but every little bit helps. Find something worth giving time or wealth to and reconnect with your humanity.

Empower the Powerless

Authority is countered most by giving power to those it oppresses most.

Let the little guys run things. Support women's rights to govern their own bodies. Oppose racism in every form. Stand up for the homeless, LGBTIQs, immigrants, First Peoples, the mentally ill. Rebalance the scales of Justice.

Be Kind

Human societies that function well are marked with a distinct kindliness in public manner. Being genuinely well-disposed toward and concerned about your fellow citizens is one of the surest defenses against social disfunction — until some jerk takes advantage of it, of course.

Organize

Numerous small groups offer the best counter to one large one. They're cohesive, they're highly personal and they're hard to keep track of.

Organize tribes, clubs, posses, coops, unions, extended families, communes — anything but governments.
